The Interiors Section of Smithsonian Gardens designs, installs, and maintains tropical and flowering plant displays for public areas inside the Smithsonian museums. These displays include tropical plant exhibits, flower arrangements, tabletop dish gardens, holiday decorations, and an annual Orchid Exhibit. Each composition helps to highlight museum exhibits, define spaces, and provide a pleasant experience for the visitor. Plants are selected for their cultural appropriateness and educational value. They are supplied by the Smithsonian Gardens’ Greenhouses, where they are maintained and rotated on a regular basis.